

Unlike the others,
he did not want another job.

One last time he was officially escorted to his residence.

He spent long evenings watching
the sun set on the grasslands.

So much unfinished work!
He did not bother to watch TV.

He got himself some things he did not have time for when in the office ...

... but it had no use.

His wife convinced him of taking a vacation, but it did not help either.

He felt restless.

He knew that, when the tide turned, they would call him again. So all he had to do was wait...
